It is unnecessary to present at length the evidences of the wonderful properties of the Trico-pherous when the public have furnished such an endorsement as this. The cheapness of the article, and the explanations given of its chemical action upon the hair, the soalp, and in all cases of superficial irritation, first recommended it to the attention of the people. This was all that the inventor desired. Every bottle advertised itself. The effects of the fluid exceeded expectation. It acted like a charm. The ladies would not be without it Country dealers in every section of the United States found they must have it; and thus was built up a wholesake trade of an extent bitherto unheard of as regards articles of this kind. The highest point has not yet been reached, and it is believed that the sales this year will be a million and a half of bottles.

All the veterinary surgeons and dog doctors of the vicinity were consulted upon this painful incident and its probable consequences. They all gave advice and imparted sympathy, but none undertook any measures of relief. One day the dog was standing upon his hind legs, his fore paws resting upon a window-sill, in order that he might contemplate his master, who was walking in the shade of the public park. It is supposed that the position stimulated nervous action, for a spasmodic choking succeeded, and, after some effort, the animal brought up the coin and deposited it upon the window-seat. You remember the gas-pipe plot, in expected to do military service and to go off like sannon. It seems that an explosion of a very deadly nature may be improvised in this way, for an old man has just committed suicide by means of a piece of stove-pipe. He was overcome with grief at the drafting of his son into the army. He stopped a parcel of projections such as roofs are usually up one end, bored a touch-hole, filled the end with gunpowder and bullets, fastened the pipe in a vice, and with a piece of red-hot wire fired the charge.

The American residents of Paris are fairly scat tered to the four winds of Heaven. Indeed, I hardly know of any remaining in the city, excep the correspondents, who never expect a holida Some are sea-bathing at Dieppe, and day gas-lighted ball rooms on Wednesday and day nights; some have retired to country house ter-worn energies in digging in the mould and lifting heavy watering pots; some, those who really have affections to cure and disorders to re-move, have contracted for three months at the waters of Vichy; some are in Switzerland, others in England, and some few have gone for the summer to the United States. That the population is very much thinned is evident from the appearance of the streets. There are many people are yet in town, and who will remain ing the season, but who will not be seen in public. either at the Bois, or the Champs Elysées, or the theatres. Appearing in any of the Parisian rethe summer in a pent-up town is suggestive of a demi-fortune and curtailed resources. Many citizens-that class who are thin-skinned on the subject of following the fashions, and who have the sus bility without the means of the hautton-if they wan to live a very secluded life during the hot months their blinds are closed, and to the passers-by the occupants appear to have fled the city, and to be snuffing the odor of green fields, or fishing in shady streams. About the first of October blinds are thrust open with considerable fracas and heads are thrust forward into the abandone street, as if to renew a forgotten acquaintance ship. If anybody notices this movement, he unreturned from their chateau, and that as the air

It is made by a combi of innumerable small pieces of glass which reflect the light of the burners at various angles. These glasses revolve around the burner. M. Visconts, the architect of the Louvre and director of the celebration of the 15th, has attended a trial of the new illuminator. It was highly successful, and at midnight people could read by it at a distance of three quarters of a mile. It will be useful not only in fêtes, but for the signals of ships, for railroads, for works carried on by night, for turnels, &c., &c.
The tribunal of Correctional Police lately tried man, named Simion, for swindling and other offences. In 1852 he was a commercial traveller, but he abandoned that calling for the more adventurous one of living by his wits. He first of all started a journal, but it soon failed. Then, in conjunction with another man, he undertook to obtain restitution of some property confiscated by the Porte in 1797; afterwards he started a bank of exchange, and in his quality of banker swindled a tradeswoman, named Julien, out of bills for 3,000 francs, which she had confided to him for discount. He afterwards represented himself as an employé of the Prince President, and at the time of his journey to Bordeaux went to that city, as he said, to accompany him. While there he wrote to his wife to say that a gold medal had been awarded to him for saving a woman and a child in danger of drowning; and on his return he produced a certificate of that act, purporting to e signed by the mayor of Bordeaux, but which, it subsequently appeared, had been drawn up by writing-master. He next began to represent himself sometimes as an attache, at others as a courier of embassy, and he adorned his name with the title of count. He went to Rome to present, as he said, some verses to the Pope, praying him to come to France to crown the Emperor and he took the precaution of striking out of his passport the mention of his profession and business, and of inserting the words: Ant. Simion was nominated courier of embassy the first January, 1853; and the authentic documents proving it have been deposited in our bureau; signed A. de Renneval " At Rome he made acquaintance with a M'lle Vignon, who was travelling with a priest, and be embezzled 700 france which her mother, in France, confided to him for her. In the same city, it appeared from letters seized in his possession after his arrest, that ed to obtain the cross of the Legion of Honor for a sculptor, promotion for a captain in the French army, the protection of the government for the prior of a convent, &c. On his reurn to Paris he got from a tailor, on false preences, the uniform of an attache of an embassy, rom a tradesman a quantity of goods of the value of 1,240 francs. In addition to all this, he, without any right, wore a red ribbin in his button-hole. The tribunal condemned him to eighteen months imprisonment and 100 francs fine.

M'lle Rachel, who has been playing in Brussels, has been obliged to return to Paris, as she has been taken with a severe attack of acute pronchitis. She has rescinded the engagements she had made with theatres in foreign cities, and neans to devote the six weeks remaining of her eave of absence to repose and recovery.

Mr. John Bartly, Irish clerk of the American Consulate during the period of Mr. Walsh's Consulship, has been managing to live, since his retirement, by passing himself off as United States Vice Consul. This assumed title has obtained for im consideration and merchandise. It is only lately that it has been discovered, and the Minster of Foreign Affairs was made acquainted with the fact on the same day. Numerous signatures of this gentleman's name, with the borrowed title appended, are in possession of various individuals. Mr. Bartly has closed his career in Paris by absconding, leaving six notes, doubtless forgeries, behind him, and for which he has obtained the money—about 5,000 francs. They were made payable to John Bartly, Vice Consul of the United States; and the broker who disounted them says that he only did so on account of his title, which he supposed genuine. Mr. Bartly had hoped to return to the clerkship, as he supposed Mr. Walsh would be reinstated by President Fierce. Not succeeding in this, he took to forgery. He will probably go on and finish with burglary. ourglary.
